Shari Schreiber's Comments

on a few BPD message boards for extra support along the way, and I'm frankly shocked that one of them (BPDfamily.com) is maligning you, saying your license was canceled--and you're claiming to be someone you're not. I've found your materials to be more helpful than anything else I've come across (including several BPD books I've purchased), to help me better understand my ex, and why this relationship was so gut wrenching. I don't think I could have gotten through all this, without your help. Thank you, and God bless!!!

A. You're very welcome! I completed a 6-year Marriage and Family Therapist private practice internship in 2001, so perhaps this is showing on record. I took both Calif. state boards, passed the first one and was preparing again for the second, when I met with a serious accident in 2007 which could have killed me--but thankfully only left me with painful bruises, scrapes and a bad concussion. Around this time, I surrendered my application for MFT licensure, because I wasn't capable of focusing, or sitting for that upcoming exam. The BBS refunded my application fee, upon receiving ambulance documentation of the incident. Life offered a detour along my path, and I chose to take it. I have never misrepresented myself or my services--as I'm not in the 'therapy' business. Everyone who seeks my help is informed up front, that I do not work as a state licensed clinician--and there isn't anything on my site, which suggests that I do. This hasn't seemed to be a deterrent so far--even with

Schreiber claims of treating couples

Q. Hello, I am a borderline. The way you talk about people with BPD is ridiculously uneducated and offensive. You say I can't maintain a relationship; why have I been in a STEADY relationship for 4 years then? I don't feel remorse? I can't even kill a fly without feeling bad. You call me a toddler in an adult's body. You're telling people that we are good for nothing but hurting them~ even the way you refer to us suffering with borderline personality disorder. The tone in your writing is literally dripping hatred for borderlines. Please think twice next time you want to make an article about borderlines and think how hurtful it is. You write based on your opinion and treat it as a fact. We are not as bad as you make us seem.

A. I've treated Borderlines (and their partners) who've been married for 20 - 30 years, but a "steady" relationship doesn't mean a harmonious or healthy one. I'm pretty sure you'll relate more to my BPD Waif piece, and learn more about my work with the people you assume I "hate" here~ but over all, I think you should look to other web sources that don't require you to look at yourself. I must now attend to all this annoying violin music that's playing in the background.

A Woman Who Lost the Father She Loved in Her Parents' Divorce Speaks Out

Therapist Shari Schreiber, M.A., who watched helplessly as the father she loved and needed was ripped out of her life by her mother at age five, is speaking out about her experience. In a heartbreaking new column she writes:

"At five years old, I was caught in the middle of a divorce and custody battle between my parents. ...my father was the healthier parent, and had the presence of mind to recognize this at the time. Still, I was 'awarded' to my mother. Two years after my parents split, my mother was hospitalized and was absent physically and/or emotionally for long stretches of time throughout the remainder of my childhood...Back in the fifties, custody was automatically awarded to mothers. Unfortunately this practice still exists, and the consequences to children can be tragic.

"My father was the source of virtually all my affection and attention, and we shared a very close and special bond. When he left, the bottom of my world dropped out. Being without him trapped me in unimaginable pain and emptiness, and there was no one capable of comforting me or picking up the slack. My mother had [falsely] accused him of 'molestation,' a reliable 'catch word' among vindictive wives and divorce attorneys back then [and now]...

"Dazed, I wandered around for months with what seemed like a huge hole in my middle, like a cannon ball had been shot through me."

PBS Ombudsman Joins CPB in Condemning Breaking the Silence

December 5, 2005

Some of you have contacted me concerning donations to our campaign against PBS's anti-father film Breaking the Silence: Children's Stories. It is certainly true that this campaign has been costly both in terms of money and time. If you'd like to donate to support our efforts, click here. Thanks to those of you who have already donated.

PBS Ombudsman Joins CPB in Condemning Breaking the Silence

PBS's new ombudsman Michael Getler has joined Corporation for Public Broadcasting Ombudsman Ken A. Bode in criticizing Breaking the Silence: Children's Stories, noting the film's "complete absence of some of the fundamental journalistic conventions" that give a film credibility. Getler noted:

"My assessment, as a viewer and as a journalist, is that this was a flawed presentation by PBS... PBS and CPTV were their own worst enemy and diminished the impact and usefulness of the examination of a real issue by what did, indeed, come across as a one-sided, advocacy program...there was no recognition of opposing views on this program..."

"This presentation made no concession to the viewer and to the legitimate questions one would have or expect. Not only were no fathers heard from to state their side of the individual stories presented, there was no explanation [with one exception] as to whether the producers even tried to get their views..."

"The studies that one presumes back up the statistics stated on the program are not cited. Research that Lasseur uses to back up the program in his response to critics is not cited in the film; nor are the statistics cited by critics...this particular program had almost no balance, and went too far, turning it, at least in my mind, into more of an advocacy, or point-of-view, presentation..."

"PBS, to its credit, is taking these challenges seriously and is reviewing the research that went in to the program and the conclusions drawn, and has promised a response to these challenges early in December."

Corporation for Public Broadcasting Ombudsman Ken A. Bode issued a report last week in which he criticized Breaking the Silence: Children's Stories, saying that there is "no hint of balance in Breaking the Silence." Bode also noted the need for PBS to examine the program, noting that the film "needs to be reviewed for accuracy, fairness and balance."

PBS Internal Audit: National Organization for Women Outgunned by Sackson Horde, Allies

Shortly after we launched our protest of Breaking the Silence, the National Organization for Women attacked us and sent out an Action Alert urging its followers to contact PBS and voice their opinion in favor of the film. Irene Weiser of Stop Family Violence urged supporters to counter the protests by calling PBS and urging them to run the program. Toni Troop of Jane Doe Inc./The Massachusetts Coalition Against Sexual Assault and Domestic Violence warned against us, saying that film angers the "mad dads whose tactics and efforts to further the abuse through the court systems are exposed."

At the time I told my wife "I bet we get far more support than NOW and its allies do." Data cited by Getler in his report confirms this--we outdid NOW & Company by a ratio of seven to one. Getler writes:

"The mail arriving at PBS has been overwhelmingly critical...PBS reports receiving almost 4,000 e-mails, with more than 3,500 of them negative. More than 90 of 105 phone calls were also negative as were virtually all of the few dozen letters."

These numbers are understated--PBS national and its local affiliates received about 6,500 calls and letters, and CPB received about 3,500. I thank the Sackson Horde and our allies--including Fathers and Families of Massachusetts, the American Coalition for Fathers & Children, Help Stop PAS Inc., The Coalition of Fathers & Families New York, and Fathers Are Parents Too--for their support.

Getler Began His Job Early Because of Protests

Getler, PBS's new ombudsman, says he began his job early because of our protests against Breaking the Silence, noting "waiting for me on my first day at PBS was a stack of e-mails, the great majority of them critical, and commentaries about a PBS documentary titled, Breaking the Silence: Children's Stories. He wrote:

"I joined PBS on Nov. 15. Before I got here, the plan was that my first column, and the Ombudsman's full Web site, would be launched on Dec. 20. But some controversy got here before I did and the main subject of this column is a PBS program, Breaking the Silence: Children's Stories, that aired on Oct. 20. Rather than wait until two months after the program was presented, I'm posting this column early while the events are still reasonably fresh.

New Column: AB 400 Will Help Wisconsin's Children of Divorce

My latest co-authored column, AB 400 Will Help Wisconsin's Children of Divorce (Wisconsin State Journal, 12/3/05), concerns a new bill which will protect children of divorce's relationship with both of their parents by limiting post divorce move-aways. I co-authored the piece with family law attorney Jeff Leving.

To write a Letter to the Editor of the Wisconsin State Journal, Wisconsin's second largest newspaper, concerning "AB 400 Will Assure All Parents' Rights," write to lwsjopine@madison.com.

As I noted in the column, the bill recently passed the Assembly and now resides in a Senate committee. Wisconsin Fathers for Children and Families is working to get the bill passed--to help support their efforts, click here. The text of the bill can be seen here.

As you know, move-away legislation has been one of the focuses of my work over the past three years. In California, the California Supreme Court ruled in favor of the non-relocating parent in the LaMusga case in April of 2004. In that case, Gary LaMusga fought an eight year battle to prevent his children from being moved from California to Ohio by a vindictive ex-wife. To learn more about that case, see my co-authored column Is a Pool More Important than a Dad? (San Francisco Chronicle, 5/4/04) and California NOW Takes Stand Against Working Mothers (Sarasota Herald-Tribune, 2/23/04). Also, see my radio commentary on the case in which I critiqued feminist arguments in favor of the relocation mom.

As many of you know, in the summer of 2004 I helped lead a campaign to stop SB 730, a bill which would have destroyed the LaMusga decision. On August 16, 2004 syndicated columnist Dan Walters--viewed by many as the ultimate Sacramento insider--wrote a column saying that we had no chance of succeeding. A few minutes after reading that column I received word that the leader of the California Senate had pulled the bill and we had won. It was one of the greatest upset victories in the history of the movement for shared parenting.

Lobbyist Michael Robinson of the California Alliance for Families and Children was also a key part of that effort, as were many family law professionals committed to the proposition that children need both of their parents. To learn more, see California Senate Leader Pulls Anti-Child Bill in Face of Huge Opposition.

To hear me discuss the move-away issue and LaMusga on PBS's Los Angeles affiliate, click here. Feminist law professor Carol Bruch, with whom I clashed on the show, authored the mothers' brief in LaMusga. To hear Gloria Allred, Garrett Dailey (LaMusga's attorney), and I discuss the move-away issue on His Side with Glenn Sacks, click here.

Hope for the Holidays: Spontaneous Reunification

The Christmas season is a special time for kids and families. But it can also be an exceptionally difficult time for divorced or separated dads who have been driven out of the lives of the children who love them and need them. Cases of Parental Alienation Syndrome--wherein children's minds are poisoned by one parent against the other--are even more painful. I detailed several wrenching PAS cases in my recent co-authored column PBS Declares War on Dads (Los Angeles Daily Journal, San Francisco Daily Journal, 11/1/05).

Last Christmas season we did a His Side with Glenn Sacks show on Spontaneous Reunification--the documented phenomenon in which a child attempts to reconnect with a rejected parent on his or her own initiative without intervention from the courts or by a mental health professional. Bizzare

Je ne comprends toujours pas comment il se fait que la pantallonnade qui prétend faire la promotion de l'égalité entre les femmes et les hommes s'appelle féminisme. En tout logique le féminisme n'a pas d'autre objet que la promotion des avantages consentis à la caste des femmes.

Quand c'est un homme qui se déclare en faveur de ladite égalité, il est aussitôt accusé de misogynie. C'est un anti-féministe disons le mot, un masculiniste haineux. Je suis troublé.

Si, d'aventure, je devais me prononcer en faveur d'un système d'Apartheid qui reconnaît aux femmes des privilèges inférieurs à ceux qui sont accordés aux hommes je serais accusé de misogynie. Je serais classé dans le camp des anti-féministes. L'Apartheid n'est-il pas justement le fait du féminisme?

Il y a des gars qui sont en faveur de l'égalité entre les femmes et les hommes qui ont droit à l'appellation contrôlée de féministe. Ils militent en faveur de l'accumulation de privilèges accordés à la caste des femmes. Ce sont des pisse-assis. Dans une relation de couple ils font le tapis.

People with Borderline Personality Disorder suffer from arrested emotional development. As such, they have difficulty with boundaries (for themselves and others), and have deficits in empathy, impulse control.

Boundary issues typically draw intense media exposure, because of their sensationalistic or bizarre nature. Headline stories about women or men engaging in dangerous/foolish behaviors at great risk to their personal and professional lives, are typically generated by borderline disordered individuals. Whether we're hearing of teachers having sexual relations with their students or a wife severing her husband's genitals, we're observing a lack of impulse control that's associated with borderline pathology. Are you feeling incredulous or shocked by incidents reported in the news? You're probably hearing about the consequences of someone living with this disorder.

Council for the Status of Men Canada

Public and members notice

April 22, 2007

Justice Clement Gascon Quebec Superior court gave men's case blessing to proceed.

Yes April 19, 2007 Justice Clement Gascon granted Mr Braunschweiler and Mr

Levy's motion for extension of schedule in case 500-17-027874-059

Braunschweiler and Levy (Plaintiffs) VS. Barreau Du Quebec, Attorney

of Quebec and Revenue Quebec (Respondents).

It is fitting that as the 10 year anniversary of the feminist manipulated of the Canadian Divorce Act as of May 1997 our trial of that corruption of our administration of justice by feminists will finally be going to trial, thanks to the Honourable Justice Clement Gascon very good understanding of law.

This trial will expose the subversion by lawyers of our most fundamental principals of justice in Canada, the independence of the legislative, practise and judiciary sections of our administration of justice, the fundamental foundation of our legal system.

Yes next month is going to be ten year anniversary since the Canadian

Divorce Act was changed by the Liberal government at the feminist request and for reasons of enrichment for the Liberal party of Canada and to the detriment of divorced men and children of Canada.

Did the change of May 1997 to the Canadian Divorce Act have any beneficial effect for the divorced family unit?

Well considering the Liberal Party under the new Liberal leader Stephane

Dion has circulated radio announcement claiming 80% of single moms live in poverty and Mr Dion knows how to fix the problem shows the Liberals again sucking in the feminists agenda as if still being manipulated by feminists forces, (from Quebec university of Laval feminist studies possibly).

Has child poverty been reduced in single parent families in Canada, since 1997 changes of the divorce act?

Well Liza Frullia as Canada's social development Minister spent hundreds of millions of dollars of our tax money over ten years claiming to be fighting child poverty but in fact the money was squandered by women's groups and
